Backdrop:

In the wake of catastrophe created by COVID-19 and sudden lockdown in the country, the present educational scenario is undergoing number of shifts in our nuances of using appropriate strategies & methods to address emerging challenges effectively in the context of educational processes in general and teaching-learning in particular. These shifts can be perceived in the form of changing emphasis from Face to face Teaching to Online Teaching, from Face to face Learning to Online Learning, from Face to face Communication to Virtual communication etc. In lieu of adopting blended mode first, the challenge of switching directly to online mode poses problems in respect of getting attracted towards not only digital knowledge and understanding but also nurturing digital skills and competencies which will enable us to confront the problems squarely faced during designing & conducting online teaching. In order to cater this critical need, Learning Management Systems (LMSs) prove to be one of the effective way for managing and controlling teaching learning procedures. Thus, it is pertinent to explore & understand various protocols for switching to ONLINE mode which will help in conducting online activities and programs in a more gratifying manner.
